Company History

During the late 1950's, the expanding high-technology industries along Route 128 (the "electronic highway") began demanding more sophisticated and specialized suppliers. High-tech firms wanted better and more consistent quality of components, a higher level of service, and product specialists who understood technology-based problems and could suggest technology-based solutions.

In response to this industry demand, Electronic Fasteners, Inc. (EFI) was founded to specialize in the AN, MS and NAS fasteners used by the electronics and defense industries. The founders' stated mission was to create a company which would provide these industries with fasteners of better quality, with a higher level of service, and with specialized fastener knowledge and technology.
